

The two confidence men and their lady friend retire into a summer garden, where they divide the spoils. It is here they are surprised by the detectives. After a hard struggle they are overpowered and taken into custody. The rube, glad to get his money back, starts for home.

Zek's wife gives him a warm reception. After he has delivered the money to his better half and promised never to go to town again he is taken by the ear and led into the house.

But he had a good time just the same!

Mike and his friend, looking for some fun, insert the following advertisement in the daily papers:--"A young lady of nice appearance and independent means wants a husband. Come to the park music stand at 3 P. M. Wave a handkerchief. Suitor to be recognized is to stand on his head.

The next day sees Mike attired in a lady's suit, sitting on a bench in the park, waiting for the suitors. They come in bunches trying to stand on their head.

The situations strike Mike so funny that he bends over upsetting bench and all. When falling down his trousers are seen.

The suitors seeing that they had been duped start after Mike who seeks his escape in a wild flight. The Film is exceedingly funny and must be seen to be appreciated.
